PULASKI, TENN FRIDAY MORNING; DEC'R. 28, 1866.

A Disgusting Exhibition. The spectacle of some twenty or thirty young white women walking arm in arm with as many negyo men in a procession in one of the Northern States, is an outward type of the inward spirit of the most degrading and besotted fauaticism that ever disgraced a civilized country. We have no manner of objection to make to the indulgence of such social tastes by those of the white race who are capable of making them, only deprecating their being obtruded upon the public.

RETAIN

There are certain decencies of civilization which lunaties cannot be expected to observe, but which are none the less disgusting when people who have sense are made involuntary spectators. Shocking as such an exhibition as that referred to is, it is only a specimen on a small scale of what fanaticism would like to see everywhere, if it s voice could be potential. When the "outstinks" of one race can prevail over the "lostinks" of another, it will probably succeed. But nature has set up a barrier against revolting intermixtures, which will not be easily over- FIRTS, come. It is not the destiny of this country to be converted into a mulatto population. The small minority of social Pariahs may indulge ad labitum their peculiar propensities but will hurt nobody but themselves .-Baltimore Transcript.
